Put residential stories in everyday settings

Silverkey’s seasonal work shows its audience familiar spaces through a holiday checklist and a winter-wedding series.

Lead each frame with one familiar action

Numbered frames use a door handle and a wall switch as quick visual cues. The number stays in the same place as the scene changes.

Keep the image doing the most work

A pet and a security camera give two frames their own subjects. The house style carries across both with short captions and consistent placement.

Show the occasion through its setting

The wedding series uses soft photography and seasonal lettering to give the first frame an inviting tone.

Give each setting its own view

The walkway and rooftop panels show how the same visual treatment can hold different spaces together.
